
This firmware is for GS5, GS5e, S6, S6 edge, Note 5, Note 5 edge and Tab S3. If you want to update to a new firmware, select your device model from the list and scroll to the "Install" button in the bottom right corner. When you select the device, the device model will be checked and then you will be redirected to the firmware download page. You must be on the latest security patch as the update will not be applied if your device is not updated. You can download the latest firmware with the release date of the current firmware at the top right corner of the page. To upgrade to the new firmware, connect your device to your computer via USB and then transfer the firmware file from the computer to your device. The device will be connected via USB to the computer and it will be listed as an external device. Make sure that USB Debugging is turned on, otherwise the device won't be recognized by the computer. You can change the firmware in the "Firmware update" section, which is the last section of the firmware installation. You can select the region and language and you can also use the "Text only" option. How to Flash your device? Turn on your device by pressing and holding the home key for about 5 seconds. Select the "Settings" option and then scroll to "Firmware update". Tap the "Firmware update" button to begin the firmware update. The "Downloading the firmware" will take a while depending on the device's speed and you will be able to hear the small motor inside the device. The device will now begin the firmware update process. After the update, you must hard reset your device by pressing and holding the power key and home key for about 10 seconds. You can now return to the home screen and start using your device. Notes: The firmware is updated with a new version number. If your device is not able to update to a new version of firmware, you can check the update details in Settings > About phone > Firmware update > Check for updates. There may be an issue in updating the firmware if you follow these steps too fast. Please wait for the firmware update to complete. Samsung firmware updates are not 82157476af
